ⓘ Future Windows on Arm devices will no longer support AArch32, therefore we recommend updating your targeted platforms to Arm64 (AArch64), which works on all Windows on Arm devices, as soon as possible in order to ensure your customers can continue to enjoy your experience. Learn more

If you are using Visual Studio, be sure you signed in with the same account associated with your developer account, as some parts of the package are specific to this account. Learn more

Drag your packages here (.msix, .msixbundle, .msixupload, .appx, .appxbundle, .appxupload, .xap) or browse your files.

Device family availability

This table shows which packages will be offered to specific Windows 10/11 device families (and earlier OS versions, if applicable) in ranked order. If a device family’s box is unchecked, new customers on that type of device won’t be able to acquire the app (though customers who already have the app can still use it, and will get any updates you submit).

☒ Let Microsoft decide whether to make this app available to any future device families

⚠️ This product will not be available to customers on Windows 10/11 unless you check one or more device family boxes.
